Assemblin acquires KE Rörinstallation and strengthens its heating and sanitation capabilities in Sweden

Assemblin has acquired KE Rörinstallation i Nyköping AB, a Swedish plumbing and HVAC company based in Nyköping, Sweden. The company has annual revenue of approximately SEK 46 million and 10 employees.

The acquisition supports Assemblin Caverion Group's growth strategy and strengthens Assemblin's position within cooling, heating and sanitation installations in Sweden, with a particular focus on refurbishment and renovation energy-efficient HVAC solutions in technically demanding buildings.

KE Rörinstallation is headquartered in Nyköping and operates mainly in the Södermanland county and the surrounding areas southeast of Stockholm. Founded in 2019, the company has built a strong regional position through consistent growth, technical expertise, and high-quality project delivery. The company serves commercial and residential property owners as well as construction contractors.

"KE Rörinstallation is a reputable H&S company with strong technical capabilities, solid customer relationships and a management team with clear ambition to continue developing the business. Together, we see good opportunities to strengthen our regional offering, increase capacity and create value for customers through collaboration and cross-selling", says Andreas Aristiadis, CEO Assemblin Heating & Sanitation, EVP.

For KE Rörinstallation, becoming part of Assemblin creates a platform for continued growth while preserving the company's local identity, customer focus, and entrepreneurial way of working.

"We look forward to becoming part of Assemblin. This gives us the opportunity to further develop our business together with a strong industrial owner, while continuing to work close to our customers and employees in the way that has made the company successful", says Victor Kjellberg, founder and CEO of KE Rörinstallation.
